

BIG LINER RUNS DOWN SCHOONER

Deutschland Going at Full Speed, Sinks the Fishing Craft Harry G. French Off Nantucket Light.

CREW OF SIXTEEN HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

By Quick Work the Men on the Sailing Vessel Manage to Launch Their Boats—Stern Quarter Cut Off.

Steaming at full speed through a dense fog ten miles off Nantucket Light, half an hour after midnight today, the Hamburg-American liner Deutschland ran down and sank the fishing schooner Harry G. French, with Capt. Rufus McKay and sixteen men aboard.

By marvellously quick work the crew of the schooner succeeded in launching the boats and escaping before their craft went down. They were brought into port on the Deutschland, most of them wearing clothing contributed by members of the crew of the liner.

The Deutschland ran into the fog at 9 o'clock last night and an extra watch was placed. Special lookout was kept for fishing vessels and occasionally the sound of fog horns was heard in the distance.

At 12:35 o'clock the bow lookout heard a fog horn dead ahead. Immediately the engines of the liner were reversed, but the great mass of steel plunged along and a moment later the side lights of the schooner were distinguished. A desperate effort was made to swing the big liner clear.

Liner Struck Schooner.
Had the distance been a little shorter the attempt would have succeeded, but the sharp prow of the steamship struck the little schooner a glancing blow and chopped off her stern quarter as cleanly as though the job had been done by a giant knife.

The jar of the collision was felt on the Deutschland and scores of frightened passengers hurried to the deck, where they were reassured by the officers and the stewards.

There were three men on watch on the deck of the schooner when the liner rammed her. Capt. McKay and the remaining thirteen of the crew, tired out with a hard day's work, were asleep below. When the Deutschland struck their little vessel she careened so far that many of the men were spilled from their bunks.

The sailors, trained to danger, were not at a loss to know what had happened. One of the watch shouted down the companionway that the ship would go down in a few minutes and warned his companions to leave no time. Without waiting to put on any of their clothes Capt. McKay and his men swarmed to the deck.

Escaped in the Dories.
Long practice made the launching of the dories child's play to them. Far up on the deck of the liner the men heard orders shouted and in the twinkling of an eye they were running for the life-boats. But before the Deutschland's life-boats were cast off the little dories were putting away from the side of the sinking schooner. In answer to a hail from the liner Capt. McKay said that his crew was safe and a minute later he and his men were taken aboard.

Clambered up the towering sides of the liner they saw their little dories sink beneath the waves, carrying all their clothing and personal effects and forty barrels of mackerel which they had caught and stored since last Saturday.

Half an hour after the collision the Deutschland was careening along again, hulled down from the scene of the disaster and with the crew of the wrecked vessel on board.

The fishing schooner was owned by Capt. McKay, of the Deutschland, says that the wreck was a terrible one, and among seafaring men the sinking of a schooner by a liner on the fishing banks is considered one of the incidents of the business.

Capt. McKay and his men were sent to Nantucket this afternoon.

Felt the Big Ship Quiver.
Miss Ethel Barrymore, the actress, was a passenger on the Deutschland and a witness of the collision, of which she gives the following graphic account.

"The regular weekly concert had just closed and many of the passengers were quite drowsy, but the air was delicious. Suddenly we heard shouting on the rear deck and the collision, of which she gives the following graphic account. 'It was not a hard shock, I might describe the feeling as though one were being hit by a big log in the river. We knew that there had been a collision and I looked over the side and saw the schooner.

"Our boat it appeared, had cut off a section of the little fishing schooner, and far below we could see the wounded ship scraping along our side. We could hear the frantic shouts of the men on her decks and many of the women on the Deutschland began to scream.

"In a few minutes the shipwrecked men were aboard our boat. Some of them had fallen in the water. The women busied themselves with getting refreshments while the men passengers dug up clothes and the ship officers did all they could to get the poor fellows dry. Before we had time to tire we took up a collection which netted, the unfortunate crew of the fishing schooner $200."

WEST SIDE "L" TIED UP.
The entire west side "L" system was disorganized for two hours this afternoon by a blockade that began at the downtown station at One Hundred and Tenth street and eventually extended to the terminus at One Hundred and Fifty-fifth street.

"In the confusion hundreds of passengers found for points in midtown from the north were crowded to Fifty-ninth street on the express tracks, and many found for points on the Sixth avenue line were taken down Ninth avenue, and vice versa.

A motor on a south-bound train gave out at the One Hundred and Tenth street station so effectively that the train could not be moved until the car was jacked up. When the road was open again the management sent most of the cars westward, and One Hundred and Twenty-fifth and One Hundred and Sixty-fifth streets to Fifty-ninth street.

Up to relieve the congestion on the downtown platforms below Fifty-ninth street sent trains down the Sixth and Ninth avenue divisions in alternate relays of five. There was a continual roar of complaint, but the railroad employees insisted that the confusion grew out of the only method by which traffic could be placed on a reliable footing in a short time.

BRADSHAW WED GIRL SECRETLY

Came to City with Miss Helen Burnette May 16 and Young Couple Were Married in Uptown Church.

PAIR SEPARATED AND BRIDE RETURNED HOME.

Relatives and Friends Amazed When They Heard that the Young People Were Wedded More Than a Month Ago.

The reason why young Joseph Paul Bradshaw and Miss Helen Burnette, of Franklin, Pa., were not married in the latter city on Tuesday, although all arrangements had been made by the bride's parents for the ceremony and Franklin society was anxiously awaiting the event, was because they had already been secretly married and had not the nerve to go through another ceremony for the purpose of fooling their relatives.

On May 16 last Miss Burnette met Bradshaw in this city by appointment. They had then been engaged some ten months and had decided to get married secretly because Bradshaw's parents, while very fond of the young woman, thought it would be better to wait until he was well established in life before being married.

With some friends, whose names are not revealed, they went to St. Agnes' Chapel, at Ninety-sixth street and Columbus avenue, that evening, and were married by the pastor. After the ceremony they had a little dinner and then separated. Miss Burnette stopping with some friends she had come to town to visit and returned to Franklin the next day.

Bradshaw went back to Orange and the next day was at work again at the office of Clark, Dodge & Co., brokers, at No. 36 Wall street, where he is employed in a clerical position.

Keeps Marriage a Secret.
Neither the young man, his bride nor the friends who were taken into their confidence ever revealed the secret to anybody, and Miss Burnette's people were as amazed to learn to-day what had happened as was the Bradshaws.

Young Bradshaw made a clean breast of the entire affair to-day to his brother Percy, who has an office at No. 25 Broad street, and directed him to summon his father and tell him. Capt. W. H. Bradshaw, the father of the boys, was immediately summoned from Orange, to Percy's office and was told about the secret wedding. He laughed heartily over it all and said he didn't see why the boy wanted to keep it quiet so long. Both Bradshaw and his pretty young bride can be very sure of the forgiveness of the Bradshaws.

Young Bradshaw was forced to tell the entire truth about the matter because of the stir which was caused by the notorious telegram sent to Miss Burnette at Franklin on Monday night stating that her fiancé was ill. This telegram was signed with the name of Percy Bradshaw, but Percy declared it to be a forgery. The effect of the despatch, however, was to bring Miss Burnette to New York on a special train. When they got here they found Bradshaw in splendid health. He had not been ill at all.

Telegram Caused Gossip.
In view of the fact that all Franklin folks had expected the wedding to occur on Tuesday, the sudden departure of the bride, the telegram saying the prospective bridegroom was ill, and then the news that he was not ill at all, set tongues wagging. The Bradshaw family insisted from the first that no wedding had been arranged, but Franklin despatches insisted that it had.

Meanwhile the Bradshaws could not be found in this city. They were said to be stopping at a hotel, but just what hotel no one seemed to know. Even the Bradshaws couldn't find them. Young Bradshaw was with his wife and her mother all the time, but not until today did the couple tell her the truth.

The mystery of who sent the telegram, however, is not cleared up yet. Young Bradshaw believes it was the work of some person who knew of the secret wedding and wanted to force publicity. Whether that was his purpose or not, it was the exact effect that his telegram had.

and Mrs. Bradshaw have not made any plans for the future yet. The young husband has obtained a leave of absence, and he and his bride are going to enjoy their somewhat belated honeymoon now. Just where they are going the sign will reveal.

How little suspicion the respective families had of the condition of affairs is shown by the announcement sent out from Franklin last night by the bride's sister that she understood they had been married yesterday in this city, and by the following interview with Mrs. Bradshaw, Joseph's mother, in Orange this afternoon.

"Joe may be married and he may not. I have no information on the matter. If he has been married, I can understand it only on the theory that the publicity his engagement has had made him think it necessary. If he is married, his choice has the hearty approval of his family. We are a united family. Helen has visited us from time to time, and Joe's engagement has had our sanction. Helen is a girl of culture and refinement and we never have had the slightest objection to the marriage.

Thinks Telegram Was a Joke.
"What we can none of us understand is how any one could have been so cruel as to send that telegram to Helen saying that Joe was ill and bringing her here in the middle of the night with her mother and brother. Lawrence Burnette and Joe used to work together in Clark, Dodge & Co.'s office and were great friends.

"They were both fun-loving boys and used to play a good many pranks. Perhaps some one in that office, with a queer idea of humor, played this as a joke to get even for some prank that Joe or Lawrence had played on him. It is a peculiar idea of a joke, but they have some very peculiar ideas of humor in Wall street."

Actor Kellard Bankrupt.
John E. Kellard, actor, with a residence at the Shore Road and Ninety-sixth street, filed yesterday in the Federal Court, Brooklyn, a voluntary petition in bankruptcy with assets of $5 and liabilities of $295. Among the creditors are George Fortescue, of Bay Ridge, whose claim is $300 for money lent.

EDITOR DANIELS FREED BY COURT

Newspaper Man, Adjudged in Contempt for Refusing to Pay a Fine of $2,000, Liberated on Habeas Corpus.

ARBEVILLE, N. C., June 30.—Josephus Daniels, editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, who was committed to the county jail for refusal to pay a fine of $2,000 for contempt of court, has been set free by order of Judge J. C. Pritchard, of the United States Circuit Court.

Daniels was fined and committed by Judge Purnell. Judge Pritchard held in his opinion that Judge Purnell was without jurisdiction and that his judgment was therefore void.

The case was taken to the United States Circuit Court on a writ of habeas corpus obtained by Mr. Daniels after he had refused to pay the fine imposed by Judge Purnell and had been committed.

Evening World Outing Mont Pelee Again a Gigantic Fountain of Fire

THE MONT PEELE SPECTACLE BUILDING.

ST. PIERRE AFTER ITS DESTRUCTION.

Mont Pelee is alive again! The great crater on the Island of Martinique is once more pouring fire and lava over the unfortunate city of St. Pierre!

Thirty thousand people perished in the terrible outpouring of the angry volcano on May 8, 1902. Only a few witnesses escaped to describe the scene of awful terror when burning lava and molten rocks were hurled down the mountain side out into the harbor completely demolishing the town of St. Pierre.

To-day you can see this mountain pouring forth its burning destruction without fear of injury. By visiting Coney Island and seeing the most wonderful electro-educational production in that city of wonders.

The Evening World, realizing the educational value of a presentation that marks an event never to be forgotten in the history of the world, has chosen this magnificent spectacle, which combines the entertaining, the instructive and artistic, as an offering to the newspaper merchants who stand as a great army to serve the public with the daily news. Twenty thousand admission tickets to "Mont Pelee" have been secured from Randolph McNutt, owner of the big attraction, and these will be distributed among the faithful retinue of newspaper merchants, so that they and their families may see the picture of the greatest disaster in the history of volcanic eruptions the world has ever known.

On Surf Avenue, adjoining the public park at Fifth street, visitors to Coney Island will be attracted by a beautiful new building of imitation rock granite. The building, which is of artistic architectural design, is surmounted by two towers, one of them 125 feet in height. This is the home of the great reproduction of Mont Pelee and the building, which is 225x150 feet, is the largest separate amusement structure at Coney Island.

The building was designed by Esmond & Johnson, architects of the beautiful Temple of Music in which President McKinley was assassinated in Buffalo. Through an arched entrance, thirty feet wide and thirty-two feet high, visitors to Mont Pelee pass into the outer lobby, a handsome place with decorative effects in rich red and green. If you are late to the performance there is a delightful inner lobby into which you are ushered to await the next setting, and this immense lobby, which is decorated in the same rich red and green, with gold moulding and ceilings in raised steel panels, is 130x30 feet. Stairs and elevators of rattan accommodate the late comers. The walls are hung with maps and pictures of the Isle of Martinique, showing the location of Mont Pelee and St. Pierre. A large oil painting of St. Pierre, with Mont Pelee in the distance, shows the city which was devastated by the cruel outpouring of the volcano.

Facing into the huge auditorium, which accommodates 1,200, the immense stage, with its proscenium opening of 100 feet, is seen guarded by two bronze lions. It is not constant to say that Mont Pelee is the coolest sight one can witness at Coney Island, but it is a sure thing that the great building, which is cooled by six big ventilators and ventilating fans run by electric motor, is the coolest spot in the island.
